Dear Colonel Dalton:

Thank you very much for a most interesting visit to the Army Intelligence School on 31 August.

I wanted very much to visit the School and I am now more glad then ever to have done so. With all the cross currents of uncertainty today it is important to convince our young officers that a career in military intelligence can not only be extremely interesting but also rewarding in terms of opportunities for advancement. I will certainly continue to do all that I can to persuade the Army's top managers that this is essential.

Thank you also for a very pleasant lunch. I enjoyed the graduation ceremony and the opportunity to exchange thoughts later with some of the students and faculty.

Faithfully,
